The Garden of Good Deeds
Islamic Stories for Young Hearts
Fay's Faithful Reminders

Table of Contents

01 The Author

02 Welcome Note

03 Dedication

04 The Honest Litle Boy

07 The Kind Stranger

11 Asma's Brave Heart

15 The Gift of Patience

19 The Lost Lamb

The Author

As salaamu alaikum.

Faheema is a mother, writer and passionate storyteller dedicated to sharing the beauty of Islamic values with young hearts. Inspired by her own faith journey and love for nurturing children's development, she created this collection to spark joy, curiosity, and learning in little minds.

Welcome Note

Welcome, dear readers!

Assalamu Alaikum wa Rahmatullahi wa Barakatuhu!

Welcome to The Garden of Good Deeds, a collection of stories designed to fill young hearts with the beauty of Islam. Each story in this book is crafted with love and care, aiming to nurture kindness, faith, and the values that shape the hearts of our little ones.

As you journey through these pages, may the lessons learned inspire reflection, the characters spark curiosity, and the messages ignite a love for good deeds in your child's heart.

This book is not just a collection of tales—it's an invitation to grow together, learning timeless lessons that build a strong foundation for both this life and the next, insha'Allah.

We hope you and your family enjoy these stories as much as we enjoyed creating them!

Warmest regards,

Faheema
Author of The Garden of Good Deeds

Dedication

To my two beautiful children, whose love and light inspire me each day to grow, strive, and become a better version of myself. You are my greatest motivation and my endless source of joy.

© 2024 Fay's Faithful Reminders
All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced without permission from the author.
Disclaimer These stories are based on Islamic teachings and are simplified for children.

The Honest Little Boy

Once upon a time, in a small village, there lived a boy named Bilal. Bilal was known for always telling the truth, no matter what. One day, his mother asked him to take some bread to the neighbor, Auntie Amina.

As Bilal walked down the street, he saw a group of children playing with a ball. They invited him to play, but he remembered his mother's words: "Take the bread straight to Auntie Amina."

Bilal smiled and said, "I can't play now, I have to deliver this bread first. I promised my mom."

The children nodded, and Bilal continued on his way. But suddenly, the ball rolled right in front of him, and without thinking, he kicked it back. Unfortunately, he kicked it too hard, and the ball hit a fence, knocking over a pot of flowers.

"Oh no!" said Bilal. He felt scared but knew he had to be honest. So, he knocked on the door of the house. An old man opened it, looking confused.

Bilal said, "I'm really sorry. I accidentally kicked the ball and knocked over your flowers."

The old man smiled. "Thank you for telling the truth, Bilal. Most kids would have run away, but you have a good heart."

Bilal felt proud. After helping the man clean up the flowers, he rushed to deliver the bread to Auntie Amina. When he told his mother what had happened, she hugged him and said, "Honesty is one of the most important qualities. You showed good character today, my son."

From that day on, Bilal was known not just for telling the truth, but for always doing what was right, no matter how hard it was.

“O you who have believed, fear Allah and speak words of appropriate justice.”
— Surah Al-Ahzab (33:70)

Dua:
O Allah, make truthfulness a habit in my words and actions, and guide me to always do what is right, no matter the situation.

The Kind Stranger

In a bustling little town, there lived a boy named Hamza. Every day after school, Hamza would run through the busy streets on his way home, smiling at the market sellers, greeting his neighbors, and occasionally stopping to help someone carry a basket of fruits or open a door.

One sunny afternoon, as Hamza hurried along the path, he noticed an elderly man standing at the edge of the road. The man seemed lost, his face creased with worry, clutching a map in his trembling hands. Hamza paused and approached him.

"Assalamu alaikum, uncle," Hamza said kindly. "Do you need help?"

The elderly man, his eyes softening at Hamza's greeting, replied, "Wa alaikum assalam, my son. Yes, I'm looking for the mosque, but I've lost my way."

Hamza smiled brightly. "I know where it is! It's not far from here. I'll walk with you."

They walked together, and the old man began to tell Hamza about his life, how he had traveled from a neighboring village to visit the mosque and pray. Along the way, Hamza listened intently, nodding as the man shared his stories of faith and patience.

When they arrived at the mosque, the man looked at Hamza with gratitude shining in his eyes. "Thank you, my boy. May Allah reward your kindness. You remind me of the good people we are taught about in our faith."

Hamza felt a warmth in his heart. "Alhamdulillah. I'm glad I could help, uncle. May your prayers be accepted."

As Hamza turned to leave, the old man called out, "Remember, young one, the best deeds are often those done in secret, when no one but Allah is watching."

Hamza smiled, his heart full of joy. He hadn't helped the man to be praised or recognized, but simply because it was the right thing to do. And that's what made his small act of kindness so precious.

"Whoever does an atom's weight of good will see it."
— Surah Az-Zalzalah (99:7)

Dua:
O Allah, guide me to do good deeds that please You and make me among those who help others with sincerity.

Asma's Brave Heart

Asma was a little girl who loved the outdoors. She would run through the garden, picking flowers, chasing butterflies, and watching the birds as they flew across the sky. But as soon as the sun dipped below the horizon and the sky grew dark, her heart would start to pound with fear.

You see, Asma was afraid of the dark. She didn't like the shadows or the strange sounds that seemed to whisper through the night. Every night, she would ask her mother to leave the lamp on as she drifted to sleep.

One evening, after playing outside until sunset, Asma felt her familiar fear creeping in as the night took over. She hurried inside and found her mother preparing dinner. "Mama," Asma said softly, "I don't like the dark. It makes me feel scared. Can we leave the light on again tonight?"

Her mother, Fatimah, knelt down and smiled at her. "Asma, do you know that even in the darkest night, you are never truly alone?"

Asma blinked in confusion. "But when it's dark, there's no one around. It feels so empty."

Fatimah gently placed her hand over Asma's heart. "Allah is always with you, my dear. He watches over us whether it is day or night. Whenever you feel afraid, remember to say, 'Bismillah,' and trust that Allah will protect you."

Asma thought about her mother's words as she got ready for bed. That night, she decided to try something different. Instead of asking for the lamp, she whispered, "Bismillah," and snuggled under her blanket. As the room grew dark, she focused on the thought that Allah was watching over her, even when she couldn't see.

At first, her heart raced as the shadows danced across the walls. But slowly, she began to feel calm. She remembered that Allah is Al-Hafiz, the Protector, and that no harm could come to her without His will.

The next morning, Asma woke up feeling proud. She had faced the dark, and her fear was smaller now. She smiled, knowing that with Allah by her side, she was braver than she had ever realized.

"So do not fear them but fear Me, if you are [indeed] believers."
— Surah Al-Imran (3:175)

Dua:
O Allah, remove fear from my heart, and help me trust in Your protection in all moments.

The Gift of Patience

Zayd was a lively boy who loved playing with toys, especially the ones his father brought home from the market. One day, after finishing his chores, Zayd eagerly waited for his father to return with a special gift. His father had promised him a new toy camel, and Zayd could hardly contain his excitement.

As the sun began to set and the evening breeze drifted through the windows, Zayd started pacing back and forth, his eyes fixed on the door. “Where is Baba?” he whispered to himself. Every time he heard footsteps outside, he rushed to the door, only to find it wasn’t his father.

Hours passed, and Zayd felt frustration bubbling inside. "Why is Baba taking so long?" he muttered.

His mother, who was watching from the kitchen, smiled and called him over. “Zayd, come sit with me,” she said gently. “Do you know that Allah loves those who are patient?”

Zayd crossed his arms, feeling a little embarrassed. “But Mama, it’s hard to wait! I really want my new toy!”

His mother laughed softly. “I know it’s hard, but Allah rewards those who show patience. Even when things take longer than we expect, if we trust in Allah’s timing, we will always find something good waiting for us. Sometimes, the best gifts come when we learn to wait.”

Zayd sat beside his mother, thinking about what she said. He remembered how the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) taught that patience is a form of worship. Slowly, he let out a deep breath and whispered, “Okay, I’ll be patient.”

Not long after, the door finally opened, and his father walked in, carrying a beautifully carved toy camel. Zayd's heart leapt with joy, but more than that, he felt proud of himself for waiting without complaining. He realized that patience, like the toy in his hands, was a gift from Allah.

"Indeed, Allah is with the patient."
— Surah Al-Baqarah (2:153)

Dua:
O Allah, grant me patience in times of waiting, and make me strong in trusting Your perfect timing.

The Lost Lamb

One bright afternoon, Fatima and her younger brother, Yasin, were helping their parents at their farm. The sheep were grazing peacefully, and the air was filled with the sounds of birds and the soft bleating of the lambs.

As they were finishing their chores, Fatima noticed something. “Yasin,” she called out, “I think one of the lambs is missing!”

Yasin's eyes grew wide. "Oh no! What do we do?"

Fatima quickly glanced around the field. They could see most of the flock, but one small lamb, the youngest one, was nowhere to be found.

"Don't worry," Fatima said confidently. "We'll find it. The Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) was always kind to animals, and he cared deeply for them. Let's go and search for it."

They started walking around the farm, calling softly for the lamb. After some time, they heard a faint bleating from behind a small hill. Fatima and Yasin rushed over, and there, tangled in a bush, was the lost lamb. Its tiny legs were caught in the branches, and it looked frightened.

Fatima knelt down and gently freed the lamb. "There you are, little one," she whispered, stroking its soft fur. The lamb nuzzled her hand as if to say thank you.

As they guided the lamb back to the flock, Yasin asked, "Why did you help it, Fatima? It's just a lamb."

Fatima smiled. "The Prophet taught us to show mercy to all of Allah's creatures. Whether it's a person or an animal, we should be kind and take care of them. Every creature, big or small, deserves kindness."

Yasin nodded, understanding that even the smallest of acts, like helping a lost lamb, could be an important way to show love and mercy.

"And be kind as Allah has been kind to you."
— Surah Al-Qasas (28:77)

Dua:
O Allah, make me kind and compassionate to all Your creatures, and help me to act with mercy, just as You show mercy to me.